Pricing reflects the full scope of the work – not just the sessions on your calendar. Between every session, Cari is listening to what you've sent, reviewing your progress, refining your customized plan, and carrying your development with her across the year. That work is built into the program – not billed by the hour – and it is part of why private mentorship with Cari is a singular relationship, not a session package.

What singers say.

In nearly 15 years working as a professional singer-songwriter I never received the kind of guidance and support that Cari Cole offers. With infinite patience, she has clarified the road ahead, helped me rebuild the broken pieces and supported me in laying the new foundation for a signature sound. My voice, now a stronger instrument that I had the pleasure of testing it next to the world's most beloved tenor, Andrea Bocelli who invited me to sing alongside him. I was able to reach high notes with such power that the press spent 30 minutes interviewing me on my vocal accomplishments, picking my brain for how I did it. I could only say “Cari Cole!” Working with Cari is truly an amazing gift. Do it!”

About Cari Cole

Cari Cole is the creator of The Cole Vocal Method™ – a master holistic biomechanical voice-building system developed over forty years from a lineage that began at the Metropolitan Opera. Her clients have performed at the Grammys, American Idol, The Voice, NPR Tiny Desk, the CMT Awards, and the Americana Music Awards. She is a voting member of The Recording Academy, has taught at Columbia University and NYU, and has spent over three decades building world-class artists from New York City.

Cari is also the CEO and Founder of Cari Cole Voice & Music Co., a female-owned and operated music company empowering artists and musicians for over 35 years. Her latest venture, CCVM, is a newly structured music label services company providing artists with a seamless path from creation to completion.

The window is now.

Private training with Cari Cole is among the most sought-after and limited offerings in the music industry. Cari works with a small number of singers each year – selected specifically because they are serious, committed, and ready to build something world-class. This is not a program that scales. It is a singular relationship with one of the most trusted ears and minds in the business.

What makes this even rarer: there are more years behind Cari than ahead of her in the private studio. She is at the absolute peak of her mastery – 40 years deep, with more insight in a single session than most singers encounter in a decade of training. But this chapter has a natural horizon. At some point – she doesn't know exactly when – she will step back from private training to do the greater legacy work only she can do: the books, the next generation of CVM coaches, the resources that carry this method forward long after the private doors close. When that happens, direct access to Cari ends. There will be no waitlist that reopens. There will be no next cohort.

If you have ever considered working with her privately, the window is now. Not because of a launch deadline or a marketing countdown – but because this is genuinely, quietly, one of the last seasons she will offer this. The singers who say yes now will be among the last to have had Cari Cole entirely to themselves for a year.

Your next step.

She is looking for serious singers who want to build magnificent instruments, step fully into their artist identity, and stop leaving their voice to chance. If that is you, apply. The door is open. For now.
